HONG HING

Hong Hing was actually the name of his store, his real name being Fong Yen Lew. After a half-century career as a hopkeeper, second-hand dealer, bootlegger, gambling house and general leechboy he returned to China, presumably to die. Instead, he married a woman forty years his junior, who pre-empted him with an heir before old Hong joined his ancestors.

MEMORIES OF A CHINESE BOY

When I returned to Chinatown, I went to school and helped my parents in the store. Our store was the centre of activity especially used by the people from the islands as a waiting spot for bus transportation or for the right tide to set out on to meet friends. Leave messages and for any other help the family could give. My Mother gave candies to the children. They called her Grandmother while the customers usually called her Mother Chang. — NING CHANG
